JULY 2006

SPARKS' PERSPECTIVE

Ron Sparks Commissioner

Many sections of our state are suffering from drought conditions. If we do not get sustained rain soon, the drought conditions will spread all over the state. Today, hay, corn, cotton and peanuts are affected by the drought. Experts already predict the Southeast corn crop is destroyed.

Last summer, hurricane winds and too much rain were the top concerns for natural disasters in the agricultural industry in Alabama. This year, it is drought. Over the last few months, I have spoken to many farmers who are all very concerned about their situation. We have had one of the driest springs in recent years. There has been widespread damage to crops and our cattle farmers are badly in need of feed.

In June, I went to Washington DC with Governor Bob Riley to meet with USDA officials and some members of Alabama's Congressional delegation about this problem. I am optimistic about their willingness to help find ways to ease the burden experienced by farmers. Fortunately, we have had some good rain in parts of the state the last couple of weeks, but we will need more to be able to survive the summer heat. We have to be prepared in case we don't get the rain we so desperately need.

Back in April, the Department of Agriculture and Industries announced the implementation of a statewide drought monitoring system in Alabama. This system includes a network of five observation wells which transmit ground water level data on a real-time basis through satellite telemetry that begins operation this month. I hope that we will be able to establish a network of 25 wells over a five-year period which will provide information that allows observation of the onset and duration of drought conditions in ground water.

We will continue to work with Alabama's farmers and producers to try to solve the problems we are facing because of the drought. I hope that in the next few weeks we will have good news from our Congressional delegation, the USDA, and our weather forecasters.

ALABAMA GROWN RABBIT

One hundred thousand pounds of rabbit meat ago - in 2003 - a small group of farmers gathered under the big shade tree at J.C. and Pat Holt's farm outside Muscle Shoals. They were there to talk about the possibility of developing a livestock marketing cooperative that would return a good profit but be compatible with the needs and circumstances of smaller-scale family farms. That meeting gave birth to the Tri-State Rabbit Growers Association (TSRGA), an over 300 member organization made up primarily of growers from Alabama. TSRGA has received assistance from the state Department of Agriculture under the leadership of Commissioner Ron Sparks and Deputy Commissioner Glen Zorn, NRCS and especially Mike Cornett, director of the Tombigbee RC&D Council, and Alabama Agricultural Land Grant Alliance (AALGA) scientists and administrators of Alabama A&M, Auburn, and Tuskegee Universities. The growers themselves, however, deserve credit for being willing to learn, to take on some risks, and to cooperate in order to weather economic and literal storms - losing a processing facility and major customers to Katrina - and keep their operation going and growing.

TSRGA now boasts its own trademarked brand and logo - Rabbit Creek Farms (www.rabbitcreekfarms.com), and has reached an agreement for sales through SYSCO, the nation's largest food distributor. The grower group wanted to celebrate these milestones and thank key people and organizations for assistance. They decided that hosting a rabbit dinner would be an appropriate gesture - and, in consultation with the Department of Agriculture, decided also to make the event

PRODUCT SPOTLIGHT

Our product spotlight for the month of July is Barber's Dairy, located in Birmingham, Alabama. Barber's Dairy was established in the 1930's by George H. Barber and was successful from its beginning due to having an ice plant in the dairy. This gave the company the capability to keep pasteurized milk cold on the delivery trucks, extending its normal one-day shelf life. In the 1940's, Barber's expanded to become a regional dairy processor and distributor by purchasing several smaller, independent dairies across the state. These acquisitions continued through-out the 50's and 60's, a new manufacturing and operational headquarters came in the 70's, and today Barber's is the oldest and most recognized dairy provider in Alabama.

Barber's Dairy has an extensive dairy line including several types of milk such as: Nutrish A/B milk, which is an enriched premium brand milk, Whole milk, 2% Low-Fat milk, Fat-Free milk and Chocolate milk. For more information about Barber's Dairy, log onto www.barbers-dairy.com or call 205/942-2351.

ELBA DIAGNOSTIC LAB DEDICATION

The Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries hosted a dedication ceremony for the new J.B. Taylor State Diagnostic Laboratory and Bishop Learning Center on Friday, May 26, 2006. The ceremony took place at the new laboratory located at 495 Alabama Highway 203 in Elba.

"The lab at Elba plays an integral role in the study of animal health and diagnosing animal diseases," said Commissioner Ron Sparks. "I am proud that we are able to provide a facility for the lab staff that measures up to the quality of services they provide for the state."

The approximately 5,700 square foot diagnostic lab cost about $2.5 million to build. Funding for its construction was provided through the combined assistance of the Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries, Alabama Cattlemen's Association, Alabama Poultry and Egg Association, Alabama Farmers Federation, Alabama Forestry Association, Auburn University, Tuskegee University, Alabama A&M University, and the people of Alabama who approved the funding bond issue for the project.

an occasion to introduce rabbit meat to chefs and students at a leading culinary institute and to promote all Alabama-grown produce by serving as far as possible an all-Alabama menu.

The dinner was held June 7 at The Culinary, a fine dining restaurant owned and operated by the Culinary Institute of Virginia College (www.culinary.com) in Birmingham, with guests including members of the Alabama Legislature, AALGA administrators and scientists, Extension and NRCS personnel, and representatives of the Department of Agriculture, SYSCO, and Western Supermarkets, which have carried TSRGA meats for the last six months.

Speaking at the dinner, Commissioner Sparks said, "I felt it was important for the Department to commit time and resources to this group. One of the best ways to insure that family owned farms survive is to develop profitable ventures for them to enter, and growing meat rabbit is proving to be just that." State Senator Roger Bedford also congratulated the group in brief comments, and was thanked for his role in securing an appropriation to the Department of Agriculture for meat rabbit promotion and marketing.

Rabbit is a tasty all-white meat with nutritional qualities that should make it very attractive to health-conscious food shoppers. It offers per-portion servings higher in protein than chicken, beef or pork but much lower in fat and cholesterol. Biological by-products of rabbit production also have high value for medical research, and AALGA faculty are helping Tri-State growers investigate this possible additional income source.
